Sexy little gals, fire breathin' preachers, angry men, and a politician.
This little Missouri town's fixin' to EXPLODE!

“Set in a small Missouri town abandoned by once-booming industries, Bill Rogers' play examines the anger, political paranoia and religious psychosis festering in the vacuum that gainful employment and pride used to fill. Herman Johansen's excellent direction of a tight script makes riveting black comedy of talk-radio doggerel...” Grace Suh, The Pitch

“Along the way, the play explores a range of current problems—from the recession to underage pregnancy, immigration, welfare, crystal-meth labs, racism, education, the condition of art and artists, and even high school football...honest and witty.”
